Election Committee Chairman

The results have been counted and you can see by the above those who gained a seat on the Board.

One name that drew a lot of votes was Jose Salas. I was very surprised as in my opinion he didn't appear to do much to encourage voters.

He was never, to my knowledge, present at any board meetings...I was told .he was never present at any "Candidate's Chat" sessions and he didn't appear for the Candidates Forum. So, I was very confused as to why he ran and why so many people voted for him.....then it hit me like a ton of bricks!

Maybe he was going to pull a "D'Lorah move" That is what I call it when you run for office, wait until all the votes are counted and then resign. Could that have been his motive all along?

Don't misunderstand....Jose is a really nice and friendly fellow and I think he would have been a great addition to the board....but it didn't appear that he was interested or concerned enough to put himself out in public.....so why run? But more importantly, why on earth would members vote for someone who appeared indifferent? That's when I thought of the "D'Lorah move."

With so many votes received, maybe Jose would consider running for the Board next year? He would probably win.
